The flicker of the peat fire in a crofts open hearth has through the generations been the inspiration of the versatile musicians of the highlands, although nowadays the peat fire is not so common the high standard of musicianship as displayed by the Wick Scottish Dance band is still there.

The Band since their outstanding first long playing record "Heather & Shamrock" was released have been in constant demand for broadcasts, dances and theatre work touring most of Britain, their lively brand of music giving enjoyment to countless thousands. In this their latest recording apart from the traditional Scottish band instruments they have effectively used the banjo in some of the tracks and the Hawaiian guitar in the Gaelic Waltzes.
