GLASGOW BORN ANDY STEWART has a vast fan following in Scotland and his popularity is spreading rapidly south of the border. It is as a singer that he is currently finding fame, but this represents only one aspect of his talent. Basically, he is a comedian, but he is also an accomplished actor and impressionist.

Andy started out in show business as a straight actor and studied at Glasgow College of Drama until 1964. In 1963, whilst still at the College, he starred in the "College Pudding" show and was singled out for stardom by many professional artists who saw the production. He turned down many offers made to him after the show because he wanted to complete his college course. In 1964 Andy made his first appearance in a play, and the following year he became compere of "Highland Fling"—a TV series. More recently, he was featured regularly on the "White Heather Club Party" air series, a spot that helped to enlarge his popularity. Andy also had the pleasure of appearing before the Queen Mother at the London Palladium at a mammoth charity performance in December, 1966.

Andy Stewart is a young man with a very bright future in show business, and no records in particular he will most certainly become a big name.

On this EP he presents four titles that have proved very successful for him. They vary in mood and style and show that Andy Stewart is indeed a versatile performer of the highest order.
